“ Ron was a great friend of my wife and I and a mentor for me during our years together at a consulting engineering firm. He was always smiling and laughing. He also was known to have that funny ornery side. As an example, we had moved into our new home that I had built and I had invited Ron to come see it whenever he wanted. One night about 12:30 in the morning we heard a loud knock on the door and opened it to find Ron and one of our fellow engineers standing there. He said he wanted a tour of the new house. My wife got up and fixed a pot of coffee and we spent an hour laughing and giving him a house tour. We shared many great times together and he will be missed. Brad and Donna Willett
