“ Ronnie was like a brother to me. He was a double cousin. Moms were sisters, dads were first cousins. Lots of fond memories, and shared experiences. I really to miss him. Bobby

“ I have known Ronnie sinse I was in school, he was Ronnie Payne's dad then, then later in life, I worked for him on and off for several years in the oilfield for Jones Drilling. He was tough to work for, but he was safe, experienced, and cared about those who worked with him, and was not afraid to share his knowledge. I learned much from him. we shared many stories about work, life, love, and hard times (we pulled some real good oilfield pranks on poor old Mouse and Kenneth to!). at the end of every shift he would say "Another day, another dollar,, a million days, a million dollars!" I will carry that phrase all my life. Later, when I worked for the City, he would visit with me often, and cared deeply about his community and country. I am a better man from knowing him, rest in peace my friend, and god be with all the Payne family.
